Dear Dr. Lee,

Diagnoses:

Right flank pain – likely renal colic

History

Ms. Evans reported sudden-onset severe right flank pain radiating to groin, associated with nausea but no vomiting. No haematuria noted. Pain improved with NSAIDs.

Examinations

Afebrile. Abdominal exam: Right loin tenderness.

Investigations to date

Urinalysis: Microscopic haematuria present.

Pregnancy test: Negative.

Clinical summary

Clinical picture suggests renal stone; CT KUB required for confirmation and size/location assessment.

Allergies and adverse reactions: NKDA.

Changes to medications and medical devices

- Prescribed Diclofenac 50 mg TDS for pain as required.

Actions for healthcare professionals

- Arrange CT KUB within 1 week.

Actions for patient or their carer

- Maintain hydration; strain urine to catch possible stone.

Information and advice given

Provided renal colic leaflet and dietary advice to reduce stone recurrence risk.

Yours sincerely,

Dr. Laura Graham

Consultant Urologist
