Patient: Mr. Nicholas Bottom

DOB: 23/04/1960

NHI: BOT1960

Dear Urology Team,

I am writing to refer Mr. Nicholas Bottom, a 65-year-old weaver, who has presented with some longstanding lower urinary tract symptoms.

Mr. Bottom reports that for the last couple of years, he has experienced a noticeable decline in the force of his urinary stream and a sensation that his bladder doesn't quite empty completely. He has been managing this himself, but it is beginning to affect his confidence. He also mentions, with some reluctance, a parallel decline in his ability to maintain sufficient firmness for intercourse, which is causing some personal distress.

His PSA is stable at 3.5 µg/L, and a digital rectal examination reveals a moderately enlarged but smooth and benign-feeling prostate.

Of note, he described a single, isolated incident three months ago following a long coach journey where he had a very troublesome hour where he felt unable to pass urine despite a strong urge. This resolved spontaneously, and he has not had a similar episode since.

Given the chronicity of his symptoms combined with the impact on his quality of life, I feel he would benefit from your expert assessment and advice on management options.

Thank you for your time.

Yours sincerely,

Dr. Toby Belch
